→ Arris Architects → Shop & Showroom → 2009 → Maharashtra → India → Photos: Amit Bhandary

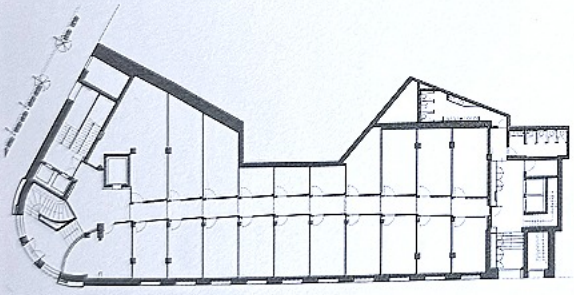

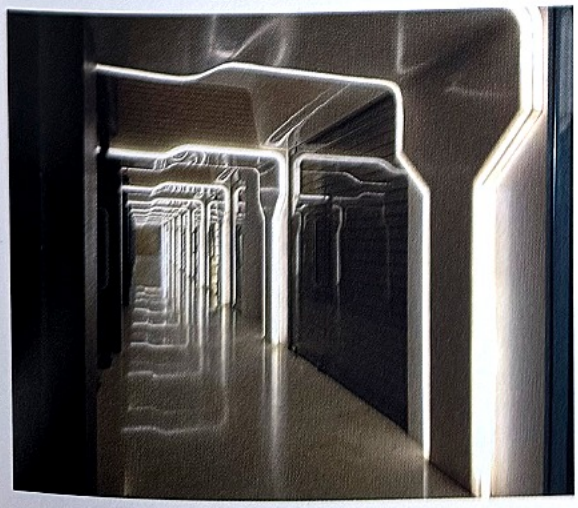

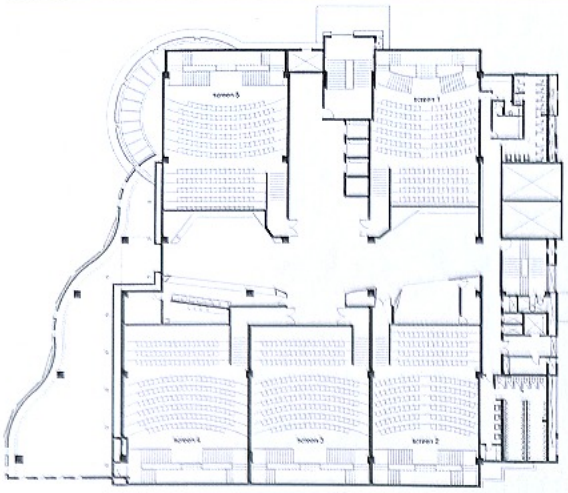

Jewel World

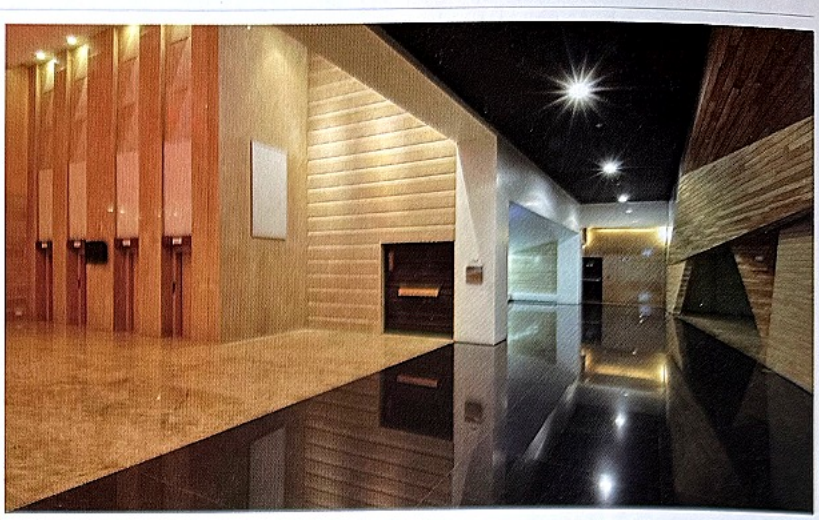

Jewel World is Mumbai's very first jewelry shopping precinct located in the heart of the diamond and gold trading markets – Zaveri Bazaar. After Pahlajani Developers won the bid for the legendary Cotton Exchange Building which is an exemplary example of Art Deco style from Mumbai, they sought to capitalise on the landmark structure's exceptional location, transforming it into a vibrant hub of business. When approached for the design of this to be iconic jewelry destination, Arris Architects were assigned demanding task – not merely to maximizse the retail footprint in a very tight structure but also offer the patrons a visual gratification never experienced before.

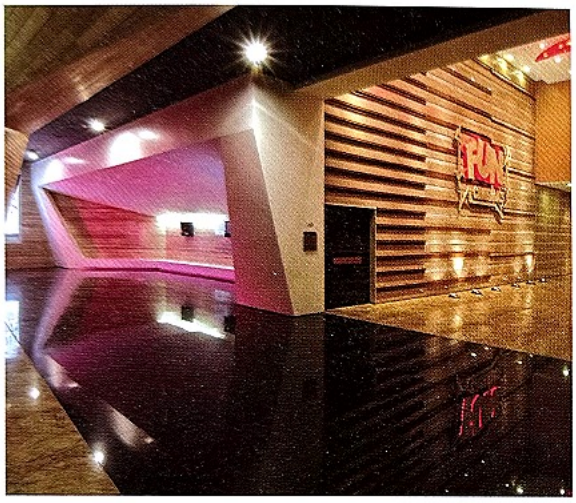

Fun Cinema Mumbai

The concessions for this cinema in Mumbai, the center of India's movie industry, are consciously crafted around the notion of materializing illusions. The attempt is made to amplify the experiences of these illusions by destabilizing the geometric form of a hexagon into a harmonious and functionally stable design which also accommodates the clients' functional requirements. The hexagonal partition acts as the focal point of the design, creating an ambience of a walk through an art exhibit. The location of recessed seating lobbies provides excellent vantage points for spectators, allowing them to appreciate the massive scale of the dynamic partition.

